John Kryspin Lab 01

Data vs. Information

   Amazon is a leading website middleman that must have a huge database to be able to sell their products. Some data examples would be the login details of each user: username, password. And they have a huge database of all their products which can be searched through with their search engine.